Local Sacramento artist Neil Riehle has been working as a professional illustrator and designer for nearly 30 years. Developing his cartooning skills as a T-shirt artist in the early '80s, he continues to sketch illustrations for business and pleasure. He has worked as a graphic designer creating advertising & marketing materials, and was a partner in his own graphic design business for several years. He has produced work as a commercial artist for projects that include brochure & book design, magazine & periodical advertising, web design, 3D & multimedia graphics, and even composed architectural blueprints.

From an early age he has had an interest in comic books. He began to collect them as a teenager, fascinated in the art of storytelling with drawings. Planning to make a profession as a comic book artist, he attended art school. After leaving school, he found his way to Sacramento and began his art career there. Today, with several projects in the works, he is developing new characters & stories and continues to hone his comic book art skills. Collected on these pages is some of his cartoon handiwork.

For more examples of his work, check out the RANDOM EYE SPOTLIGHT and WALLOPI! You can see more illustrations on the website splashpages.com.
